

BOB ROBINSON, Porterville college student who placed fifth in bull riding at the National Finals rodeo in Los Angeles last week, is shown in his present profession aboard Flint Hills at the National Finals, and as a stu-

Bob Robinson, Top Professional Cowboy, Points Toward Dentistry At Porterville College

Bob Robinson, one of the country's top professional cowboys, is now enrolled at Porterville college as the first step in changing a successful career as a saddle bronc rider and bull rider into a new career as a dentist.

It is not uncommon, nowadays, for a college graduate to hit the professional rodeo circuit, but for a professional cowboy to hit the college circuit is a somewhat novel twist, especially in the case of Robinson, for he is 33 years of age and he has a wife and five children.

Born in Calgary, Canada, and calling Cochrane, Alberta, Canada, his "home town", Robinson has been in professional rodeo since he graduated from high school in 1950, winning the Canadian saddle bronc championship in 1956, and placing fifth just last week in bull riding at the National Finals rodeo in Los Angeles. He won this event in the National Finals in 1962.

And from 1960 through 1962 he worked in the business end of rodeo as executive secretary in the Denver office of the Rodeo Cowboy association.

Robinson is not quitting rodeo — in fact he looks to professional rodeo to provide the necessary money to support his family, and to keep him in school for the three years that it will take to qualify himself for dental college.

After that, he expects to become a full-time student — maybe with money in the bank if he gets "the luck of the draw" in rodeos to come, or, as he says, "Maybe I'll be looking for one of those student loans."

And how does it feel to be in school after nearly 15 years of the tough, foot-loose life of a professional rodeo competitor?

"It's hard to suddenly come back and apply myself to college work", Robinson says. "Frankly, I'm not the best student in the world and I'm not doing too well yet. I have to study hard. But it's becoming easier as I go along."

During his years on the professional rodeo circuit, Robinson has averaged from $10,000 to $12,000 annually. During the 1964

OPERATION PRIDE, OR WHO DUG UP THAT BED OF IRIS

PORTERVILLE, Dec. 10 — Undercover police work has finally cracked the community's most sensational crime, and a "now-it-can-be-told" report has been issued through sources known to be unreliable concerning what was at first believed to be a plot to sabotage Operation Pride, then later suspected of being the work of an organized gang of Iris thieves.

Suspicion centered around the Porterville Junior chamber of commerce and the Porterville Garden club, both performing laudable work in connection with Porterville's Operation Pride.

But when, after the junior chamber boys had cleaned up the park area at Henderson and North Main as part of their project to improve the appearance of entrances to (Continued On Page 8)

COLLEGE IS UNIQUE IN RODEO FINALS

PORTERVILLE, Dec. 10 — Porterville college gained a unique distinction in the "world series" held last week in Los Angeles — a distinction that no other college, large or small, can claim.

Two "sons" of Porterville college competed in the National Finals — Bob Wiley, former star athlete, who earned second spot in calf roping, and Bob Robinson, at present a student in the college, who took fifth in bull riding, and who won this event in 1962.

Only the top 15 professional cowboys of the nation, determined on a basis of points earned in RCA season, including the $400 that he earned by riding five out of eight bulls in the National Finals, he won nearly $13,000. This ranked him 39th among RCA members in total money for the year.

Robinson has competed in every major rodeo in the United States and Canada, including the 1964 Porterville Roundup; during the season just ended he entered about 40 rodeos. While attending Porterville college, he plans to concentrate on California and Arizona, stating that he can ride nearly every weekend in RCA-approved shows but still cut down travel time, and time away from his studies and family.

Both Robinson and his wife were raised on Canadian farms and both of their fathers followed the rodeo, Sykse Robinson riding saddle broncs from the late 1920's up to the war years, and his wife's father, Charlie Ivins, still competing as a top Canadian roper.

Robinson has considered the teaching profession, but after living the independent life of a cowboy, he feels that he still wants to "be his own boss." He has thought of rodeo announcing as a sideline, and may take a summer course at Fresno State college in radio and television work.

It was not until about five years ago that Robinson started riding bulls. Up to that time he had concentrated on saddle broncs.

"In Canada when I started rodeoing you just weren't anyone unless you rode saddle broncs," he says, "so, like many other youngsters, that's where I thought my future lay. When I started to ride bulls I found that I had a sort of natural feel for them, and it was easy for me — well, easy isn't really the word for bull riding, but maybe it was easier for me than for some others."

Robinson came back from the National Finals with a torn finger, an injury he received when his hand caught in the rigging. He rode his last four bulls with this injury.

"In the rodeo game you are your own coach and your own trainer," Robinson says. "You make it, or you don't make it, strictly on your own. In other professional sports, such as football or baseball, a man has a team around him; if he can come up with a good play now and then he may be a hero. If he is injured, he still gets paid.

"But in rodeo you compete individually against every other cowboy and against every head of stock — and you pay an entry fee to do it. Sometimes you ride when you're hurt, and sometimes you take chances you shouldn't. Rodeo is a tough racket to win in, but I wouldn't trade the last 10 years of my life for anything."

As for his style on both broncs and bulls, Robinson says, "I like to ride smooth and easy. After all, a man isn't strong enough to overpower a horse or a bull, so you get into the rhythm of the animal's movements, trying to outguess him and to anticipate his moves. I suppose most of a rider's moves are reflex action because you don't have much time to think."

Bulls and broncs have patterns that they pretty well stay with, Robinson says. "After you watch a horse or a bull a couple of times you can tell the moves they will make. Most of them will run true to form 90 per cent of the time — but it's that 10 per cent of the time when they do the unexpected that gets you. And there are a few broncs and bulls that do not have a pattern, that do something different every time out. These are the hardest to ride."

Robinson says that "mean" stock is not necessarily the best rodeo stock, in fact often top broncs and bulls are gentle to handle. "You keep your eye on them," Robinson says, "but they are not mean. They just like to buck — maybe it's the same thing to them as liking to ride is to a cowboy."

Although he has been successful as a bull rider, Robinson still likes the saddle broncs. He feels that a maximum of science and skill and horsemanship and "feel of the saddle" is required.

"You're not a natural bronc rider," he says. "With rare exceptions, a cowboy has to work at it, practice, and develop before he gets in the money."

While in high school Robinson played football and hockey, and ran the mile in track. He was in line for a track scholarship to Drake University or Notre Dame, but instead of competing during his senior year, he hit the rodeo circuit.

"At 19 years the most important thing in the world to me was to become a saddle bronc rider," he says. "My father tried to discourage me, but there was nothing for me except a saddle bronc. And I would not change a thing if I had it to do over. But I would advise any young man who has ambitions for the professional rodeo to get his college education first — then take his shot at rodeo."

And why did Robinson enroll at Porterville college?

"Actually I had been accepted at San Diego State," he says, "but house rentals run high for a family with five children. An old friend of mine, Larry Southard, son-in-law of the Freeland Farnsworths, told me they had a house that I could rent on the Farnsworth ranch above Fountain Springs — and for a lot less than you can rent a house in San Diego, so I decided to move in and go to Bakersfield college. Then I found out about Porterville college — and here I am."

So a top cowboy is heading for the dental profession, making his play at an age when most people are already established in their chosen profession.

But Robinson is used to the tough go, and the same determination that made him drive to Los

Now is the time to relax and enjoy the holiday season. This you can do by joining a cruise to the South Seas, staying stoned for the month, or by rushing off to some mythical relative in Timbucto. If none of these are possible then join the rest of us in searching for five dollar type gifts that sell for two fifty. All the time knowing we'll settle for any suitable five dollar type gift selling for less than ten.

Among such things we are selling a device for telling when plants, or lawns, need water. Looks somewhat like a meat thermometer which you just stick in the soil and it instantly tells how dry or wet it is. Sells for a nickel less than five bucks. Also good for measuring how dry is your Martini.

Some universally usable gifts are the wind bells. These are available with from one to three bells according to the sound desired and the amount you wish to spend. New this year are some modernistic looking fish that are bells along with being ornamental. Pretty enough to be used indoors.

Along the same line are humming bird feeders, bird baths, sunset books, outdoor animals, weather vanes, and ornamental name plates. We hope you'll drop by for a look at these and maybe even at some of the luscious plants that are beautifying our joint. Almost worth turning down an island voyage just to see them.

What's doing?

The history of telephoning is a history of change — from the first commercial shoebox-like phone of 1877 down to the pretty, little Princess phone of today. Telephone scientists are continually at work, developing and testing new ideas in phones of the future — like the one which lets you see the person you're talking to. Every change is made for one reason: to make your telephone serve you better.

On Christmas day, 33 years ago, telephone lines carried the first radio broadcast of a complete opera — "Hansel and Gretel." It was transmitted coast-to-coast from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

It's wise to have a list of emergency phone numbers on hand. But, if you don't and need help fast, just dial zero for Operator. She has all vital numbers and the training to meet emergencies. Just give her your name and number and as much information as you can. And, here's a tip for making a "0" call in the dark: The "0" is the first dial opening below the stop bar.

Did you hear about the man who planned to dine at all the restaurants listed in the Yellow Pages of a big city's phone book? Fortunately, he can find REDUCING METHODS in that same book.

Our Town

By RUTH LOYD

Theone Falconer was yelling at me. It really wasn't her fault. The dryer was making too much noise. My dryer was going too and Ricky, Theone's little boy, was standing between us watching some little girls out the window. Ricky takes after his father. Theone is one of the few people in the world who looks delightful with her hair all put up in pink rollers. I had asked her about Thanksgiving, and she was telling me about the food they had taken out to the college to feed the "homesick Island boys". Theone's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Freeland, were here for a visit from the Islands. Mrs. Freeland knows how Island boys miss their favorite food; so she cooked up a combination Japanese, Chinese, and Hawaiian food and they took it out to the college. The boys couldn't believe their good fortune, and they were very wistful when the Freelands said they were going back home.

Then came Thanksgiving. Mary Falconer just can't seem to cook a small turkey so they asked the boys to come out to the Murry gether. They like rice and Theone had plenty of them. After dinner, and the football on TV, the boys borrowed Theone's guitar and sang one Island song and the rest of the time they sang folk tunes. Butch Falconer was home from Cal. where he is a senior, so a good time was had by all. Sixteen at the table. A nice round number.

OUR HIGH SCHOOL is planning to revise the Home Economics Dept. They asked a group of people from OUR TOWN to come to the school and be part of an Advisory committee. I received an invitation and couldn't believe my eyes. What I know about Home Economics could be put on a pin, by Don Howard, OUR PRINCIPAL, usually knows what he is doing so of course I was there on time. I was certainly outclassed. There were at least 12 women, and they seemed to know what they were talking about. They were very interested in the program and had some ideas of their own. John Martin, the lone man, introduced himself as, "just a husband". This was after some of the women in-

Porterville, members of the Porterville Garden club charged that an Iris bed they had planted in the park was missing, and a flurry of charges and counter-charges caused police to lock the entire case in the top secret file pending thorough investigation.

Loron Hodge, president of the Porterville junior chamber, denied that his group had anti-Iris tendencies, stating that any charges about anything by anybody were false, malicious and groundless, holding, in cross-examination, that his boys had never even seen an Iris in the park.

calls to various city officials, let it be known that the Iris is Porterville's official flower, and that if Iris beds cannot be protected from thieves, it's time for a change in city administration. And she pointed the finger of suspicion squarely at the junior chamber of commerce.

The case was finally broken yesterday when irrefutable evidence established the fact that the junior chamber of commerce did, in fact, dig up, throw away, and generally dispose of the aforementioned bed of Iris.

Hodge immediately pleaded ignorance, stating that neither he nor any of his members know what an Iris bulb, or root, or tubor, or whatever an Iris is, looks like.

Mrs. Prestage, horrified by this sudden turn of events, immediately demanded a city ordinance making it mandatory that all junior chamber members attend a class in Iris identification that the Garden club will set up, thereby nullifying the ignorance plea.

Even though the case of the missing Iris bed has been solved, tensions are still high. Final chapter may well be written next Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock, when junior chamber members and Garden club members meet at the scene of the crime.

from Don, we were taken on a tour of the Home Economic Dept. facilities. I have never seen such beautiful equipment. Things have certainly changed since my day. They even have an electric can opener. Now this is my idea of the height of luxury. I still use my finger nail. Now if they would only invent something to scrub the pots and pans, and put the dishes away.

One of the complaints of the teachers that seemed to be very interesting was the fact that they teach the girls to cook, but their mothers won't let them in the kitchens at home. I really don't blame them. Have you ever seen a kitchen after your daughter finished cooking? Although the teachers stress the fact that part of cooking is cleaning up, I guess the girls forget when they get home. Have you ever turned a group of amateur cooks loose in your kitchen with a recipe for taffy? You can smell burned sugar for weeks.

In the sewing rooms we saw the sewing machines and tables and some of the garments the girls were working on. One beautiful green coat was in the process of being finished and the lining was on a table close by. I was so impressed. I can't sew and I couldn't believe the girls were working on things that looked so tailored. It's not that I didn't have the chance to learn to sew in school. I was too busy doing extra curricular things to worry about what kind of a wife I would be. Now I look back on all the money and food I wasted when I was first married, and the socks I threw away because they had holes in them. Maybe if I had a pretty young teacher like Barbara Hubler I would have been more interested. As I remember my Home Econ. teacher, she was an old bat.

Last summer we had our dog inoculated for rabies at the Health Center. I sent in the money and waited for the license. No license. The dog died.

Mary Howard of the Lindsay Gazette used part of my column for her column. I was amazed. I'm still such a novice at this writing bit that I really can't believe the people read it. Thanks Mary, that was a wonderful compliment. I am honored.

Happiness is getting Father and the children off in the morning, waving good-by and crawling back into the big unmade bed and turning the electric blanket up to m-m-m-m-m-m-m-m.

JOHN REES, Lithuanian refugee who, with his wife and three children, fled Lithuania to escape communism, traveling 2,000 miles in 14 months by horse-drawn cart, will speak tomorrow, Friday, 8 p.m. at the Porterville Women's clubhouse under auspices of the Porterville Committee for the Preservation of Freedom. Rees is nationally-known for his one-man crusade against communism, warning that "it happened in my country; don't let it happen in yours." The public is invited to attend the meeting without charge; a free-will offering will be taken to cover meeting expense.

acres of cotton on the Dick Callison place south of Woodville. (Photo shows pickers lined up at completion of job).

The money will be used specifically to help pay off cost of a sprinkling system that has been installed in the baseball field at the Tule River Youth Center in Poplar.

Nearly $400,000 worth of equipment was brought in to handle the cotton picking bee. Cotton was ginned at the Tule River co-operative; regular charge for picking was paid by the grower — a cent a pound — but went to the Poplar chamber of commerce.

Donating one-row pickers were: Clarence Valine, Howard Tharp (2), Oliver & Son, (2), Leland and Donald Vossler, Overholt Bros. (3), Frank L. Day, Don Callison, James Woodard, Don Farquharson (2), James Bays, Hastings Equipment, L. D. Ryan (2), Guido Lombardi, and Tony Simonich.

Donating two-row pickers were: Roy Langston Don Kootz, Charles Minolette, H. H. Hutchinson (2), Don Fallert, and Melvin Santry.

Repair equipment was kept in the field by Hastings Equipment company, of Porterville, and by Ray George, of Poplar. Tule River Cooperative gins furnished cotton trailers.

General chairman for the cotton picking bee were Hack Hutchinson, president of the Poplar chamber of commerce, and Roy Langston; handling publicity for the chamber was Hap Sprague. Lunch was served at the home of Bob and Dallas Fallert by women of the community.

The picking bee is an annual, money-raising event for the Poplar chamber of commerce youth activities program.
